Introducing Vara, Faucet Strommen's newest collection, a celebration of presence, simplicity, and enduring design. Named after the Swedish verb meaning "to be," Vara captures the quiet beauty found in the rhythm of everyday life.

Inspired by the raw elegance of Nordic landscapes; from soft, weather-worn coastlines to the gentle arc of snow-dusted branches, each piece in the collection is thoughtfully crafted to feel both grounded and refined. With timeless silhouettes, natural textures, and a serene material palette, Vara is designed to be with you, in the still, sweet moments that define home.

Kata Vrasko
- Industrial Designer

"With Vara, we wanted to create pieces that feel like they've always belonged; soft in form, purposeful in detail, and quietly present in the moments that matter most."

From our hometown to yours.

Where Innovation Meets Responsibility

We're proudly Australian made, and for us, that's not just a label; it's a commitment to the heart of regional Australia. Faucet Strommen is deeply rooted in the industrious town of Kerang, Victoria. Our decision to set down roots here was intentional: we wanted to support a hardworking rural town, creating skilled jobs and training opportunities for locals. Today, more than 85% of our team hails from Kerang and its surrounding areas, making our brand truly a reflection of its community.

By designing, engineering, and hand-finishing every piece locally, we uphold exceptional standards while ensuring faster delivery and a personal touch. This local focus allows us to blend innovation with efficiency, so you receive tapware that's not only luxurious but also thoughtfully crafted close to home.

In choosing Faucet Strommen, you're embracing a brand that invests in regional Australia, values its local roots, and delivers enduring quality from our hometown to yours.

We are committed to making products responsibly, with respect for the environment we call home. Our factory operates on solar power, generating enough energy to run the entire facility and often returning surplus electricity to the grid. In our finishing plant, closed-loop filtration systems recycle processed water rather than sending it to waste.

By keeping machining, polishing, finishing and assembly under one roof, we reduce transport, increase efficiency and limit unnecessary waste. A continual lean manufacturing program ensures our processes remain precise, accountable and always improving.

Brass sits at the heart of our products and is infinitely recyclable. Every shaving and off-cut is collected, melted down and reused. Nothing is treated as disposable.

Three Generations,

Faucet Strommen began with a family and a clear set of values: integrity, craftsmanship and responsibility. Above all, it was founded on the belief that if you put your name to something, it must be made to endure.

In 1999, Sean Sellars set out to build more than a tapware company. Craftsmanship ran in his blood, shaped by generations of makers before him. His early years were spent crafting grandfather clocks from intricately worked hardwoods, where precision was paramount and nothing could be hurried. Fine tolerances, careful hands and patience defined the process. Before him, his father was a maker of fine furniture, continuing a family legacy built on skill, discipline and a deep respect for materials. Through each generation, that commitment to detail endured, instilling the belief that true craftsmanship is measured not only in appearance, but in performance over time.

Those early influences shaped Sean's approach from the beginning. Precision was non-negotiable. Integrity mattered. And pride in workmanship was expected, not celebrated.

Those principles became the foundation of the business.

Today, three generations of the Sellars family work side by side, guided by the same values that shaped the business from the very beginning.

And those values continue to define every piece that carries our name.
